

250th Anniversaries and Key Special Events Plans in Development

The 250th anniversary of the nation's independence (its semiquincentennial) is not just coming – it's here, and Virginia leads the nation.

As is fitting for the state that is the birthplace of the nation, Virginia's 250th commemoration will be second to none, and with proper funding, will achieve the following:

- National impact and significance as Virginia will, once again, set the standard for how to commemorate significant milestones – approaching history from multiple perspectives and through events and exhibitions that reflect the stories of all Virginians.
- Multi-year series of robust events, including three national Signature Events each year and dozens of Virginia-specific anniversaries and events across every corner of the state.
- Tremendous economic and tourism impact as VA250 will both welcome the world to Virginia and, through technology, push Virginia out to the world.
- Engage and involve every community

The 250th will be a statewide celebration and commemoration that involves - and provides benefits to - every locality and reflects our shared history through multiple perspectives. There will be a place for everyone in this commemoration. Programs will include:

- “Mobile museum” housed in a quad-expandable tractor-trailer that will bring a world-class exhibit directly to schools, museums, historic sites, and special events; and will serve as a showcase to the nation of why Virginia's History is America's Story.
- Museum exhibition at the VMHC and JYF that also includes a panel exhibition available for display in every locality.
- Robust program of grant support to localities that fund tourism and marketing initiatives, content development, and the promotion of arts events.
- Large-scale public events to mark key anniversary dates that include, among others, Patrick Henry's “Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death” speech, Virginia's Declaration of Rights, the nation's Independence Day, Sail250, and even the first meeting of the General Assembly.

Leading to 2026, VA250 will host three National Signature Events each year designed to bring the nation to Virginia, and dozens of Virginia Signature Events that mark key anniversaries and events across every corner of the state, positioning Virginia as the key destination for the 250th and ensuring lasting economic impact across the Commonwealth.
